LIVINGSTON THEATRE COMPANY

The Livingston Theatre Company of Rutgers is a university wide student run performing arts organization/learning community that involves over 100 students each academic year. Although artistic excellence has been a core part of its mission since the inception in 1998, the benefits of student development and leadership have been the anchor to its success. As Rutgers University's premiere musical theatre organization, the group has produced both classic and forgotten musicals of all size and scope.

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

As the current leadership, we are truly honored to host this milestone celebration in the Livingston Theatre Company's history. We have a first rate celebration planned for this evening that is in true LTC fashion, pulling out all the stops for an evening of musical and theatrical flair.

We could not be more thrilled to have all of you here tonight to celebrate the 15th Anniversary of the Livingston Theatre Company. We wish to welcome back the alumni, we hope that coming back to the LTC tonight is full of laughs, fun, reminiscing about old memories, and the creation of new memories. To our current members, this year has been filled with a lot of hard work, and we could not be more pleased to have you all here tonight to relax and celebrate the accomplishments of the LTC.

Throughout the years, the Livingston Theatre Company has evolved into the premiere place for musical theatre at Rutgers University, and almost every person here tonight has had something to do with that. This evening is a tribute and celebration to the shows and more importantly to the people who have made the LTC what it is today.

We hope you all have a wonderful evening. Make new friends, catch up with the old. Have a drink, have some food, and enjoy the entertainment.

Happy 15th Anniversary LTC!!

MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDER

It gives me great pleasure to be part of this exciting 15th season celebration!

As I have said many times, the Livingston Theatre Company was founded with two goals in mind; to impact the lives of those associated with it for the better and to produce strong and vibrant musical theater at Rutgers University. Tonight the evidence is clear that we have accomplished both missions.

The company's success has been possible because of you. Dedication, passion and commitment have been the catalyst for the company's accomplishments. Tonight, as the extended Livingston Theatre Company, we celebrate 15 years of making people smile and think with 50 shows. We should all be very proud.

I am so ecstatic to be associated with a group that continues its commitment to the performing arts and student development. Let's relish in the past 15 years tonight and begin another day in the LTC tomorrow!

The future holds such potential and I can't wait!

With much love and respect,

Jason Goldstein
LTC Founder and Producer Emeritus
Chairman, LTC Alumni Association

WELCOME
TO

Reunion Weekend 2013!

Reunion is a time of celebration. It is truly an exciting time to be a part of the Rutgers community, and Reunion Weekend is the perfect opportunity to learn about what has changed since you were a student here, and of course, what has stayed the same.

This weekend, you'll get an insider's view of the historic changes taking place at Rutgers — changes we want you to be a part of! Among our offerings this weekend, we want you to share your Rutgers pride with our new president, Robert L. Barchi, and learn about the many developments underway at the university. You can also get all the answers about Rutgers' move to the Big 10 Conference later that afternoon, or test your Rutgers knowledge during our Campus Jeopardy! Scavenger Hunt.

This year's celebration highlights include the induction of the Class of 1963 to the Old Guard of Rutgers as well as many more time-honored Reunion traditions and fun new events for the whole family.

Refer to this guide or look for a member of our staff or a Reunion volunteer to help answer any questions that might arise during your stay on campus. The Rutgers University Alumni Association is delighted to welcome you back for this exciting weekend!

Enjoy your weekend!
